REBUILDING TOGETHER IN MEXICO

We are part of a community of parents from the Waldorf School of Cuernavaca, Morelos, Mexico, who in response to the September 19, 2017 earthquake in Morelos, have organized to offer direct support to families affected in our state. Thanks to the independent and transparent nature of our efforts, people and civic organizations alike have joined us in our initiative. We invite you to take part and join us in REBUILDING Mexico TOGETHER.

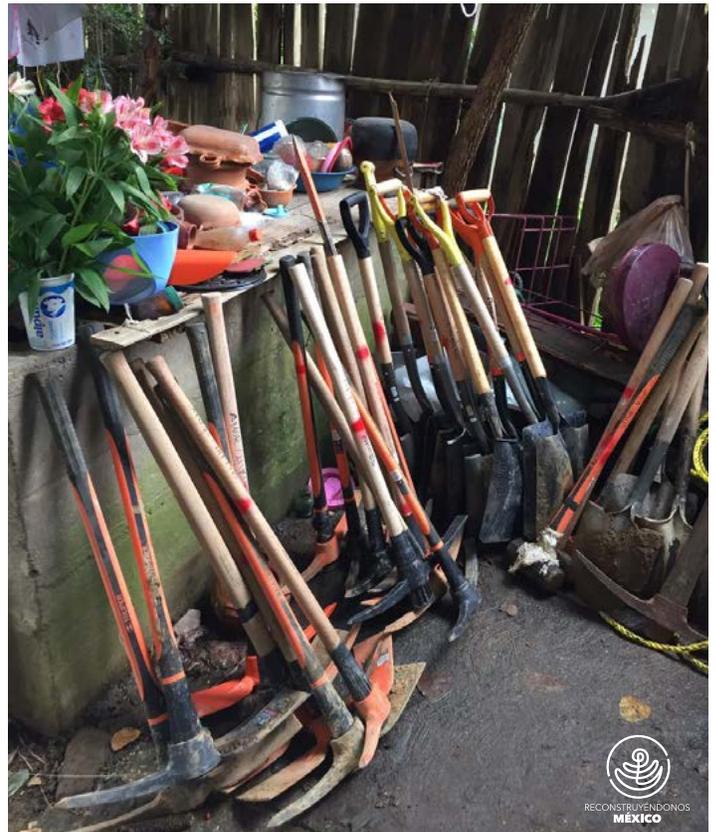

Hueyapan is an indigenous Nahua community at the base of the beloved Popocatepetl volcano in the Eastern part of Morelos, with a population of close to 6,500 people dedicated primarily to agriculture and textile weaving.

Here, and in the small neighboring villages near the epicenter of the earthquake, is where we are concentrating our energy, love, and support at the moment. Only three days after the earthquake we had already established two base camps in Hueyapan and over the last two weeks we have cleared the rubble from over 40 houses of the more than 135 houses that were damaged or completely destroyed in the earthquake. We have channeled 50 tons of materials, including water, household supplies and building materials, to Hueyapan and the other communities where our parents are volunteering. In Jojutla, a town in another area of Morelos that was devastated by the earthquake, a dedicated group of parents have set up community kitchens and are working with the local business people to begin to clear roads and jumpstart the local economy.

Right now, the focus is on rebuilding sustainable, ecologically-minded homes for those who have been displaced. Though many have focused on delivering material supplies, it has become clear that money donations at this point are the most helpful contribution, as they allow those on site to purchase exactly what is needed, and support local businesses in the process.

This has been life shattering experience for many but the country has risen to the challenge, as has our community and network of friends. We feel it is our responsibility to lift up our neighbours, as much as we feel it is a gift to be able to do so.

TU AYUDA

Solidarity is a natural response, and a beautiful one.

Thank you from the bottom of our hearts for taking part. Any and all donations make a difference.
